

Single «Lazy Day» by Wolkenpark, Release Date: 10 May 2022

«Lazy Day» contains two tracks of which the basics were recorded during three weekends in spring 2021 while Corona had destroyed all live gigs. These were live recordings, two to four takes for each track which built the base of the full album (to be released in September 2022).

The title track «Lazy Day» is composed by bass player Jean-Pierre Schaller, a smoothly rolling theme which evolves smoothly throughout the whole piece passing a dialogue like solo by bass and trumpet and culminating towards the end in looping cascades over the main theme.

The second track, composed by trumpet player Kriz «Flew» Flueler, is called «Standing Back» a relaxed laid back major/minor exercise, which is cleverly hidden by a sophisticated melody. In the studio the basic tracks were enriched by a multiplied Kriz playing additional trumpets, flugelhorns, valve trombones and even a tuba.

These two tracks actually aren't typical for the bands sound, which tends to be much more aggressive and heavy using more live effects, faster and more complex rhythms like drum'n'bass. So be prepared for the next release!

Production

The whole production was recorded and mixed by Kriz Flueler at his home studio «Klangfaktor». After years of working «in the box» (completely digital) he returned for this recording to his roots and mixed analog on finest vintage equipment like a Studer 963 desk, Urei, Amek, Quantec outboard or real tape delays. Overdubs were made by Julien Boss on Yamaha CP-70, Hohner D-6, Roland Juno 60 and other synthesizers. For more details about the equipment and the mixing process check his website <http://www.klangfaktor.ch> and/or contact him directly.
